Mayor Campbell Gives Live Radio Address

Cleveland, January 11, 2003 — Mayor Jane L. Campbell gave her first in a series of radio address this afternoon in her office at Cleveland City Hall. The City partnered with local radio station WCLV 104.9 FM to air the live broadcast.

Mayor Campbell used the five-minute address to inform listeners about the current status of the administration's goals and accomplishments for housing in Cleveland.

"In 1960, the City of Cleveland's population was just over 876,000," said Mayor Campbell. "Today it is nearly 480,000. Noting that difference, I can say with confidence that we have plenty of room for people to move to Cleveland and flourish."

Mayor Campbell went on to say, "We want to have attractive neighborhoods and create housing our citizens can be proud to call their own — at all different price points in the market. It does us no good to have great starter homes if we don't also create the housing stock into which growing families can transition."

In addition to stating her goal to develop more than 1,000 housing units per year by 2005, Mayor Campbell detailed plans for building Downtown as a neighborhood for young professionals and empty nesters.

WCLV 104.9 FM will provide taped versions of the Mayor's Inaugural Radio Address, as well as future weekly broadcasts, to all local radio stations free of charge. Greater Clevelanders can hear Mayor Campbell's next radio address on January 18, 2003 at 12:30 p.m. on WCLV 104.9 FM and at 12:50 on Classic Pops 1420 AM.
